Bankruptcy

America is in a debt crisis—that is no secret. Individuals and businesses alike are taking on debt unheard just a few years ago. Even though massive legislation went through in 2005 which changed the face of the modern bankruptcy laws, bankruptcy is still an option that exists for most people. When you meet with one of our attorneys, he will evaluate your case with a personal touch. We will listen the your specific hardships and specific needs.

Individuals generally file Chapter 7 or Chapter 13 bankruptcy. Chapter 7 bankruptcy, also called liquidation bankruptcy, is for individuals whose household income is lower than average and do not have many assets. Chapter 13 bankruptcy, on the other hands, is for individuals with higher household income and assets. Chapter 13 bankruptcy is essentially a reorganization and may be particularly helpful for individuals who may want to save a home involved in a foreclosure action.
